School was over and the chores were finished. Father and the boys went into the house to get ready for supper. Each one took his turn washing his hands and face, and combing his hair while Mother and the girls put the hot food into bowls. Father, Mother, and the five children gathered around the table and seated themselves in their usual order. Each one folded his hands, closed his eyes, and bowed his head as Father led in a prayer of thanksgiving. After a short pause while each one sat up straight, Father asked, "How did school go today, Susan?"
